SUBSTITUTES FOR SOAP.

How to Protect Tender Skins When Bathing in Cold Weather.

Persons whose skins are irritated in cold weather by the use of soap should try substituting various cleansing mixtures which may be put into the bath water.

One mixture which is liked by many women who possess delicate skins is made from one pound of marshmallow flowers, one-quarter of a pound of hyssop herb and four pounds of bran flour. The ingredients should be thoroughly mixed dry in a basin, and then about two heaping tablespoonfuls should be put into a bag.

The bags to hold this compound should be made from cheesecloth. They may be about six inches square. They need not be filled with the mixture, for a smaller quantity will be sufficient to soften the water, and the mixture if too much is used will be lost, as a bag can be employed only twice.

To get the best results the bag should be in the tub at least half an hour before the bath, and while bathing the little sack should be used as a piece of soap.

For this purpose oatmeal is excellent, but if it is to be a soap substitute the grains must be cooked for fifteen or twenty minutes to allow the starch to come out more quickly. The meal should be cold before being combined with the other ingredients.

One such oatmeal bath formula requires to five pounds of grain one pound each of powdered flintstone or riss root and almond meal and one-half pound of castile soap reduced to a powder. The almond meal may be omitted if desired. Its presence greatly increases the cost of the mixture.

Camphor is excellent for the skin, being softening and whitening. One way of employing it is to put one-half ounce of tincture of benzoin and two ounces of alcohol with one ounce of tincture of camphor.

Enough of this must be used in the bath to make the water slightly cloudy. Soap may be employed with this compound.

HOW TO GROW MELONS.

Care Must Be Used In Transplanting Those Started In Hotbeds.

Growing of melons, both muskmelons and watermelons, has become an important commercial enterprise. The use of them is increasing rapidly. The two kinds of melons require considerably different treatment.

Muskmelons thrive best in a light soil. They are very susceptible to frost. In the south muskmelons are usually planted directly in the field, but in the north they are started in hotbeds. As they are hard to transplant they are grown in small straw berry boxes or on pieces of inverted soil. The box can be removed like a flowerpot and the plant set out without having its roots disturbed in the least, or the soil may be cut up and a piece bearing a little plant put in each hole in the melon bed.

Hills should be four to six feet apart each way. Two or three plants are put in each hill. There is no much loss from insects that two or three times there must be used.

The striped beetle and flea beetle which infest the vines can be repelled by spraying with bordeaux mixture such as she had not noticed in months, and dusting with tobacco dust. In fact after a bit she tried to soften it by saying:

"There was a great dogfight in front of the house this afternoon, and an old woman got bitten in the foot."

There are two general types—the turpentine, hard rind kind, known as cantaloupes, and the soft rind kind. Many localities have favorite varieties which grow especially well there.

How to Roll an Umbrella.

A badly rolled up umbrella besides looking unsightly does not wear half as long as it ought to. The process of rolling an umbrella is very simple.

The majority hold it by the handle and keep twisting the stick with one hand, while with the other they twist and roll the silk. Instead of this they should take hold of the umbrella just above the ribs of the cover. These points naturally lie evenly with the stick. They should be kept hold of and pressed gently against the stick, and then the cover should be rolled up. Holding the ribs thus prevents them from getting twisted out of place or bending out of shape, and the silk is bound to follow evenly and roll smooth and tight. If an umbrella is rolled in this fashion it will look as if newly bought for a long time.

How to Wash Cotton Blankets.

Cotton blankets are washed differently from those made of wool. Soap them well with laundry soap, fold and allow them to soak in tepid water. Wash them in an hour or so and place in a boiler of hot suds to steam, to boil. Rinse in several waters. Use a very little bluing and dry them double on the line. Press dry on the wrong side. Quite the contrary is the process of washing woollens, for hot water cannot be used on them. Dainty quilts liable to fade should first be soaked in a tub of cold water containing a half cup of turpentine to set the color.

How to Clean a Mirror.

The best method of cleaning a mirror, whether new or antique, is that of rubbing it in the first instance with a sponge saturated with methylated spirit and then sprinkling the surface of the glass with powdered indigo. If this is left for a few moments and then dusted off with a clean leather a good polish should be obtained.

Little More Than a Bushel.

A box 16 by 18 by 7 1/2 inches inside measurement holds a little over a bushel of fruit. It has a cubical content of 2,160 cubic inches, whereas a standard bushel requires but 2,150.42 cubic inches.

BOWSER GETS HIS

Dignity Lost When He Fell on His Own Steps.

PICKED UP BY HIS WIFE.

Had Been Very Cocky at Home and the Butcher and Druggist—Tumble on the Ice Reduced Him to the Common Level.

By M. QUAD.
[Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.]

A LITTLE fresh snow had fallen, and Mrs. Bowser was sweeping it from the front steps and enjoying a whiff of the evening air when Mr. Bowser turned it at the gate.

"Hello!" was the greeting as she smiled and leaned on the broom. He ascended the steps and passed her without a word.

"Anything wrong?" was asked as she followed him into the hall.

"Your name, please?"

"My name? What do you mean?"

"Are you Mrs. Samuel Bowser or some other person?" If you are Mrs. Samuel Bowser I should like to further ask what you are doing out on the steps with a broom in your hand, as if you were working for wages.

"Why—why, a little snow fell, and I was afraid you might slip up on the steps. The cook was busy with the dinner, you see."

"Mrs. Bowser, if that is your name, I never slip up or slip down. Please remember that." Never again parade yourself out on the steps with a broom. I am surprised at your lack of dignity.

"But you have painted the front fence," she protested.

"Certainly. But I painted it with dignity. No person had the hardihood to come along and joke with me. Had put in each hill. There is no much loss from insects that two or three times there must be used."

At the dinner table Mrs. Bowser noticed that he had a stern, set look, and dusting with tobacco dust. In fact after a bit she tried to soften it by saying:

"There was a great dogfight in front of the house this afternoon, and an old woman got bitten in the foot."

Mr. Bowser waited just sixty seconds by the watch and then turned on her with:

"And you speak of a dogfight as if you thought I would be deeply interested. The idea, the absurdity! Woman, how can you think such chatter of account to a man like me?"

"But there were five dogs, all fighting at once."

"But if there had been 500 dogs?"

"And the old woman tried to stop the fight. She kicked one of the dogs, and you ought to have heard her yell when he gave her a bite!"

"Enough, Mrs. Bowser, enough," he said as he waved a hand at her. "Here is a great world around us, going on night and day. There are a thousand problems to be solved. There are a thousand great enterprises under way. There are thousands dying and thousands being born. There are old ideas to be worked out and new ones to be grappled with. There is a responsibility resting on every person's shoulders, and yet you can sit there and chatter to me of an old woman and a dogfight!"

"Mrs. Bowser Squelched.

Mrs. Bowser was squelched for ten minutes. She had seen the time when Mr. Bowser would have asked the color of each dog, which foot the old woman was bitten on, which dog got the best of it and all other particulars, but he had changed. He was another Bowser now. She looked at him and tried to puzzle it out and finally muttered up the courage to say:

"I gave a tramp one of your old vests today."

"Humph! You gave a tramp one of my old vests? And because you did so the astronomer, the philosopher and the statesman must stand still for a week? What a senseless thing when woman was created!"

Not another word from her until dinner was finished and they had reached the sitting room. Mr. Bowser's dignity worried her. She felt as small as a bug in the shadow of a giant oak. She had more news for him. One of the water pipes in the cellar had burst, and she and the cook had driven a pine plug into the hole.

The wheel of a peddler's wagon had come off and dumped him into the street. A boy had stoned the Bowser cat, and a policeman had arrested a one armed man for trying to steal a city ash cart. She had saved all these things up to tell him, but she must throw him out first. She started to say:

"Mrs. Green was over today, and we had quite a dispute. She says that a cricket is a grasshopper, and I say it isn't. I told her that I was going to ask you."

Mr. Bowser, who was sitting and smoking and thinking the greatest of thoughts, turned and gave her one awful look. Then he got up and went down the hall and put on his overcoat and hat and left the house.

Self Conscious Samuel.

A tramp accosted him at the gate, but he neither saw nor heard him.

He encountered an old woman who said that she had five hungry children at home, but he passed her as if she had been a lump of ice.

On the corner he saw his coal man waiting for a car, and he said:

"Bowser, we shall have a blizzard within a week, and you'd better let me send you down two tons of coal tomorrow."

Mr. Bowser looked across the street at the Chinese laundry and made no reply.

No reply.

"Shall I send the coal?"

That same frozen silence.

"You may go to thunder!" exclaimed the coal man as he yanked out to his car.

Mr. Bowser entered his family drug store. He bowed stiffly to the druggist and walked around with folded arms.

"Is it soothing sirup this time?" asked the druggist with a laugh.

"Sir!" said Mr. Bowser as he turned. "Your name is Agnew, I believe?"

"Oh, yes."

"And my name, sir, is Bowser—Samuel Bowser. Whenever Mr. Samuel Bowser wants anything of Mr. Agnew he'll let him know."

"Say, you've got a tapeworm, and I'll bet on it!" shouted the man of drugs, but Mr. Bowser walked stiffly out without answer.

Takes His Tumble.

Three minutes later his family butcher was a bit surprised to see him in the door. He wanted to make things pleasant, and he called out:

"Hello, Bowser! Any chicken farm on your mind for next spring?"

Mr. Bowser folded his arms and sternly regarded him.

"Anything wrong, old man?"

"Sir, I am not used to such language. Do not repeat it. If you do not know already then let me tell you that I am Mr. Bowser."

"Of course! Any order to leave for tomorrow?"

"No order, sir—no order. I may never leave an order. I am not in the habit of leaving orders at butcher shops, sir!"

"By George!" gasped the butcher when he was alone. "I thought he was Bowser, and he said he was Bowser, but I'll be hanged if I don't believe it is somebody else!"

Mr. Bowser went home. He carried his dignity with him. It passed through the gate and up the steps with him, and then it deserted him in a flash. There was a bit of ice. His foot struck it, and after a jump and a sprawl he went rolling down the steps and brought up in a snow bank. He let out three awful yells as he found himself going, and they brought Mrs. Bowser to the door. She saw in an instant what had happened, and she ran down the steps and bent over the huddled figure and exclaimed:

"Thank heaven, his dignity is gone! No man can tumble down his own front steps and hang on to it!"

HOW TO SELECT SEED CORN.

Care Will Produce Larger Ears and Much Greater Yield.

The farmer can improve his corn crop in both quality and quantity in three ways:

First, by selecting ears of a proper type of kernel and planting them by themselves, from which to select his seed. This requires but very little time and does away with the necessity of purchasing a seed corn grader.

Second, if there is more time, make selections for protein content.

Third, by planting from individual ears to prevent inbreeding. This requires considerable time, but will amply repay any one who will do it carefully. It consists in planting preferably 100 rows from 100 ears, each row from a separate ear. When the tassels are well out and before the pollen has begun to fall, go through the field on horseback and pull out the tassels from every other row.

There are three ways by which corn may be pollenized—namely, self pollenization, close pollenization and cross pollenization. Self pollenization consists of the pollen of the tassel, which is the male part of the plant, both of which are the outgrowth of the same kernel, thus producing direct inbreeding.

Close pollenization consists of the pollen of one stalk falling upon the silk of another stalk, both of which grew from the same mother ear. Cross pollenization consists of the pollen of one stalk falling upon the silk of another stalk which grew from a separate ear and no relation to it.

The seed selected for next year's breeding plot should be taken from the detasseled rows only. By weighing each row's yield you will be enabled to know which ears have a propensity to high productivity, and seed from only such rows should be saved. Corn planted from such seed will not only produce much higher yields both in quantity and quality, but owing to its strengthened constitution from being pure bred will germinate under severe adverse conditions when ordinary corn would fail to germinate.

PROTECTION FOR COLLAR.

How to Avoid Soiling It When Coat Must Be Worn.

One of the torments of winter is the soiled collar that results from wearing a coat on top of a light waist. Not even a white lining entirely overcomes the difficulty, and various methods are resorted to for protection.

There are shaped bands of plique, white and cream that can be bought to button inside the coat collar. The chief objection is in sewing the buttons so it will fit exactly.

Pique banding in bias folds is also sold by the piece. This is basted inside the coat collar, so it just shows a line of white on the right side.

Some girls wear a band of black ribbon around base of collar of blouse. The coat rests on this and protects the dress from soiling. The ends are crossed in front and fastened at each side with small cuff pins.

Newest of all are the gay stoles. These are made in straight bands of flowered satins in rich all over effects. Use five inch ribbon and turn over edges on a lining of white satin.

Make the stole a half yard and finish the ends with black silk knotted fringe three and a half inches deep.

Worn inside the coat these stoles are a protection to delicate frocks, and if artistic silk is chosen they add a smart touch under dark furs.

How to Preserve Complexion.

Lemon and water taken early each morning has become a common drink among women who value their complexion. Nothing keeps the digestion in better condition.

Since sugar is not used there is no danger of acid even for gouty and rheumatic subjects.

Do not use too much lemon. The juice of a third or half the fruit is enough. To keep the cut lemon fresh for several days is something of a problem.

Put off only the section to be used and squeeze the juice from the cut portion. The rest can be turned, cut side down, in a cup or it can be put in the same position on waxed paper. This should be big enough to fold over the lemon and keep out the air.

Treated in either of these ways, a lemon will keep several days even in hot weather. Do not stand in a warm closet nor where the fruit will freeze.

How to Make Skating Rink.

When one is building a tennis court provision may easily be made for a rink by excavating from six inches to one foot deeper than the surrounding ground and making this depressed area as much greater than the court as the purse or surroundings will permit. Twenty-five feet in the clear outside the lines of the court will give an area of over 11,000 square feet, an ample space for a number of people to occupy without crowding. The court may be flooded by means of a hose attached to a faucet, first saturating the ground and then when it is frozen flooding the court.

English Etchings.

English lawyers never wear mustaches.

During the last century nearly £1,100,000 was wiped off the national debt by property left by will for that purpose.

The London fire brigade has an average of 500 calls a month. The fire insurance policies on London property are estimated at £1,072,640,212.

In the city of London and the metropolitan boroughs there are 2,151 miles of streets, which cost £530 a mile per annum to maintain and £187 to light.

Rip's Desire.

Rip Van Winkle, through the carelessness of the hotel clerk, was not called at the time given when he registered, and accordingly he continued to sleep until he awoke with a start and found that twenty years had elapsed. His first thought was of an old friend who had been about to sit down to breakfast just at the time Rip was "fast," he said to the hotel clerk, "tell me what I like to speak to him."

HARBOR.

The remains of Frank Emery of Scarborough, formerly of this place, were brought here for burial and the funeral was at the church, Sept. 21st. A clergyman from Chatham officiated and a quartette rendered three selections. The many flowers showed the love and esteem of his many friends.

Mr. Emery lived here with his family a long time and was a worker in the church who always said yes when help was needed, and he and his wife have many friends here.

He leaves a wife, who was Sarah Goodrich and born in this place, also three daughters, Bertha, wife of Ashley Emerson; Edith, wife of Ernest Emerson; Georgia, wife of Fred Garland; and several grandchildren; one sister, Mrs. Quincy Stevens of Stow, who was unable to come on account of sickness; three brothers, Wilson of Stow, Edwin of North Fryeburg, Clifford, who lives in Massachusetts, and many other relatives. Although he moved away several years ago we feel the family belonged to us still.

Percy Jones has opened his store. Everybody is busy with corn or at the corn shop.

Rev. Mr. Hoyt of Hiram preached at the church Sept. 23d.

Hair That Fascinates.

Who Wants Lustrous Hair Full of Life and Beauty?

Start now, madam, September is just the month to begin to acquire a glorious head of hair of which you will be justly proud during the social events of winter-time.

If you haven't used PARISIAN SAGE you aren't on the right road to hair beauty. PARISIAN SAGE is the most delightful preparation that destroys the dandruff germs and by so doing removes in a short time the cause of dandruff, falling hair, itching scalp, faded and lifeless hair.

Dandruff germs are obstructionists; they prevent the hair from receiving its proper nourishment by tamely covering the scalp with a thick coating. Use PARISIAN SAGE for one week and note the wonderful improvement. Noyes Drug Store guarantees it, 50 cents a bottle. 35-39

Lecture by P. A. Campbell.

P. A. Campbell of Orono gave a very interesting talk on the Holstein cow and calf. Thursday afternoon during the fair. In opening, he spoke on the cow in general, giving as the three most important factors, its constitution, its capacity for food and, lastly, milk product. The size of the nostrils should be wide, which indicates a large windpipe and heart. Its nervous system should be taken into consideration. It should have a strong tail with life well toward the end. The udder should be up at the rear and well forward and the tits should be of good size and shape.

He took up the following list of questions and commented on each one with regard to the cow in question, and the following is the description of a perfect Holstein with the scoring:—

Head.—Decidedly feminine in appearance; fine contour, 2 points.

Forehead.—Broad between the eyes, dishing, 2 points.

Ears.—Of medium length; clean and trim especially under the eyes, showing facial veins; the bridge of the nose straight, 2.

Muzzle.—Broad with strong lips, 1.

Eyes.—Of medium size; of fine texture; the hair plentiful and soft; the secretions oily and abundant, 1.

Neck.—Large, full; mild; bright, 2.

Horns.—Small; tapering finely towards the tips; set moderately narrow at base; oval; inclining forward; well bent inward; of fine texture; in appearance waxy, 1.

Withers.—Long; fine and clean at juncture with the head; free from dewlap; evenly and smoothly joined to shoulders, 4.

Shoulders.—Slightly lower than hips; fine and even over tops; moderately broad and full at sides, 3.

Chest.—Of moderate depth and lowness; smooth and moderately full in the brisket, full in the forelocks (or through the heart), 6.

Crope.—Moderately full, 2.

Barrel.—Long; of wedge shape; well rounded; with a large abdomen, trimly held up, (in judging the last item age must be considered), 7.

Loin and Hips.—Broad; level or nearly level between the hook-bones; level and strong laterally; spreading from chine broadly and nearly level; hook-bones fairly prominent, 6.

Rump.—Long; high; broad with roomy pelvis; nearly level laterally; comparatively full above the thurl; carried out straight to drooping of tail, 5.

Thurl.—High; broad, 3.

Flanks.—Deep; comparatively full, 2.

Legs.—Comparatively short; clean and nearly straight; wide apart; firm and squarely set under the body; feet of medium size; round, solid and deep, 4.

Hair and Handling.—Hair healthful in appearance; fine, soft and furry; the skin of moderate thickness and loose; mellow under the hand; the secretions oily, abundant and of a rich brown or yellow color, 5.

Mammary Veins.—Very large; very crooked (age must be taken into consideration in judging of size and crookedness); entering very large or numerous orifices; double extension; with special developments such as branches, connections, etc., 10.

Udder and Teats.—Very capacious; very flexible; quarters even; nearly filling the space in the rear below the twist, extending well forward in front; broad and well held up, 12.

Perfection of Holstein cow—100 points.

The following list was used in taking up the bull.

Forehead.—Broad between the eyes; dishing, 2.

Ears.—Of medium length; clean and trim, especially under the eyes; the bridge of the nose straight, 2.

Muzzle.—Broad with strong lips, 1.

Eyes.—Of medium size; of fine texture; the hair plentiful and soft; the secretions oily and abundant, 1.

Neck.—Large; full; mild; bright, 2.

Horns.—Short; of medium size; at base; gradually diminishing towards tips; oval; inclining forward; moderately curved inward; of fine texture; in appearance waxy, 1.

Withers.—Long; finely crested (if the animal is mature); fine and clean at juncture with the head; nearly free from dewlap; strongly and smoothly joined to shoulders, 5.

Shoulders.—Of medium height; of medium thickness, and smoothly rounded at tops; broad and full at sides; smooth over front, 4.

Chest.—Deep and low; well filled and smooth in the brisket; broad between the forearms; full in the forelocks (or through the heart), 7.

Barrel.—Long; well rounded; with large abdomen; strongly and trimly held up, 7.

Loin and Hips.—Broad; level or nearly level between hook-bones; level and strong laterally; spreading out from the chine broadly and nearly level; the hook-bones fairly prominent, 7.

Rump.—Long; broad; high; nearly level laterally; comparatively full above the thurl; carried out straight to drooping of tail, 7.

Thurl.—High; broad, 4.

Quarters.—Deep; broad; straight behind; wide and full at sides; open in the twist, 5.

Flanks.—Deep, full, 2.

Legs.—Comparatively short; clean and nearly straight; wide apart; firmly and squarely set under the body; arms wide, strong and tapering; feet of medium size, solid round and deep, 5.

Tail.—Large at base, the setting well back; tapering finely to switch; the end of bone reaching to hooks or below; the switch full, 2.

Hair and Handling.—Hair healthful in appearance; fine, soft and furry; skin of medium thickness and loose; mellow under the hand; the secretions oily, abundant and of a rich brown or yellow color, 10.

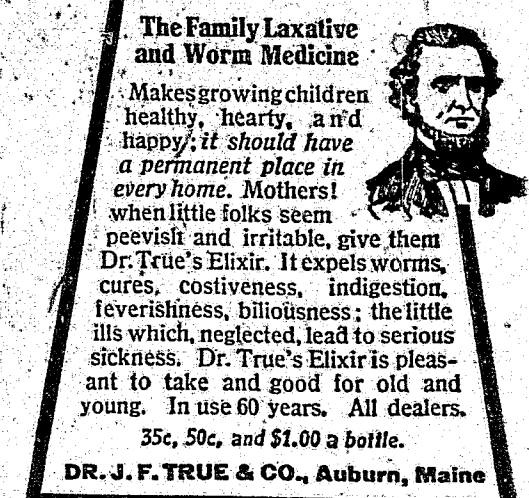

Mammary Veins.—Large; full; entering large orifices; double extension; with special development, such as forks, branches, connections, etc., 10.

Perfection of Holstein Bull—100 points.
